

Nina and Bailey, you both stood at the table, focused on threading the shapes onto the sticks. Some shapes didn't fit on but you persevered until you found the correct ones. You worked together, passing shapes to each other. It was lovely to see you both concentrating on your task. Bailey, you made a big stack of shapes and held them in your hand, letting them drop onto each other to make a sound. "Ooooh," you said, laughing to yourself, looking at Nina so that she could watch too.

Nina, you laughed and tried to get onto the table. You listened to me when I said, "Feet on the floor," and got down. Well done, Nina, for listening to my instruction.

You tried more shapes didn't you, Nina, looking underneath the table for any that had been dropped.

You passed them kindly to Bailey and helped him place them onto the sticks. He growled at you, didn't he! Maybe he wanted to do it himself. You didn't mind him growling and thought it was funny. You waved your finger at him didn't you, Nina? 😊

I wonder if you understood her, Bailey, because you then passed some shapes back to Nina.

It was so lovely to see you two working as a team and I wonder what you will both discover next?
