

Zac builds so high

Zac, you were so keen to build with the mirror blocks. You looked at them first, turning them in your hands. "Wow," you said as they caught the light.

You then began to build, placing each block on top of the other. You did this very slowly and carefully. Each time you stood back and said, "Wow"

"More, more!" you said as you placed another block on top, steadying each one as you built. I noticed how you started by crouching down. Was this to take a better look at what you were doing?

Some blocks weren't the right shape were they, Zac? You were clever and tried the triangle out, placing it on top of a cube. Then, trying to place a cube on top of the triangle, you shook your head and laughed, "No, no, no!"

You took the triangle off, replacing it with another cube, "Better now," you told me.

You stretched up tall and kept placing blocks higher and higher. They didn't topple over. I wonder if you have built tall towers before? You may like to try using bigger blocks next time, Zac?
